

Apparently the information that Captain Chester James has flown west is, thankfully, incorrect. The word is that he is still in the care facility and is stable and is working to improve his strength. Somehow the incorrect information was passed out among the pilot group and it has spread rapidly, so in light of the recent information that Chester seems to be holding his own at this time, this email is being sent in an effort to stop the rumor.

Additional information will be shared with our members when it is received. We can only provide information that we receive from others in these situations, and sometimes incorrect information gets out, so bear with us as we attempt to keep you informed with accurate information of Chester's condition. Let's hope that he gets better.

Hang in there Chester.....
